

Leader Bio: Flynn McGarry

At the age of 10, Flynn decided that he wanted to cook. He practiced his knife skills at home and would cook small dishes for his mom and her friends. When he turned 11, he started to cook more complex dinners that he found in the books that he was reading. At the time he was reading “The French Laundry Cookbook” by Thomas Keller and “Alinea” by Grant Achatz.

By the time Flynn was 12 his love for cooking and his talent grew and developed into something deeper. He began cooking for a larger audience in what He called “EUREKA,” which is a supper club that operated, at the time, out of his mother’s home. His popularity increased and he was interviewed by many TV talk shows because of his love and inspiration for cooking.

Flynn now works for restaurants in different locations and his “EUREKA” does pop-up appearances in Los Angeles, California; New York; and San Francisco.

<http://>

DININGWITHFLYNN. (n.d.). Retrieved October 26, 2015, from diningwithflynn.com

Staff, E., & McGarry, W. (2014, September 11). A Teen Chef's Rise to the Top. Retrieved November 2, 2015, from <http://ny.eater.com/2014/9/11/6157831/a-teen-chefs-rise-to-the-top>